See the clearest, freshest, healthiest version of your skin. Dermatologist-developed 3-Step.

It's true: When you take care of your body, you look and feel great.
Because you're giving it what it needs—daily cleansing, exercise, hydration.

It's the same for your skin. First, wash away the day's impurities.
Gentle exfoliation is like refreshing exercise for skin. And clears pores before blemishes emerge. You know why you drink water. That's why hydration comes last—to restore moisture balance, get skin glowing.

Our guiding dermatologists always say great skin is healthy skin. So they gave us 3-Step to make it easy to get, and keep.

66 Drumroll, please: I'm thrilled to announce that we're kicking off our second annual Pretty Amazing Contest! You could be on the cover of Seventeen and score a $20,000 scholarship. (That's double last year's prize!

Thanks, Neutrogena!) I love this contest because it's the ultimate celebration of our readers—why shouldn't a girl like you and your friends be on the cover, just like the stars we usually feature!?! (If you peeled away the fame machine, you'd see those stars are just regular girls who have big talents and even bigger dreams—just like you!)

The rules are the same—yes, you have to be pretty to be on the cover, but even more important, you have to have an amazing story to tell. It's interesting: We read 35,000 applications last year, and every single girl had achieved something major...but the girls who grabbed the judges' attention had a personal story that made them real. There are a few girls whose stories I'm still thinking about a year later: Bailey, 18, who raised $35,000 for the National Eating Disorders Association and lobbied Congress for a bill that would provide more money for research and treatment. Huge! But her story about how she suffered in secret with anorexia for years until she was finally able to fight back is what made her truly stand out. Or Gabi, 19, who distributes 3,000 blue ribbons in her town each year to show support for law enforcement. It's a local initiative, but it comes from a very personal place: Gabi's father was a deputy in her town's sheriff's department when he was shot and killed in the line of duty, and this is how she honors his memory.

So as you're figuring out what makes you Pretty Amazing, don't think of this as your college application with a laundry list of achievements and awards. We're more interested in the personal connection you have to your accomplishments—because that's what makes you special! Go to seventeen.com/prettyamazing to enter!

impress the judges!

In order to get on our cover, you'll need to get past these folks! Here's what they look for in a cover star.

"I think it's so cool that a reader will have the chance to be on the cover of such an iconic magazine. I'm looking for someone real, fresh, and with a definite point of view. Good luck, ladies!"

MY WEEKEND FAVE

"Crop tops feel so different right now. Wear a little tank underneath if you don't feel like showing your stomach."

meet SAMII!

bysamiiryan.tumblr.com

age: 20 hometown: Bethlehem, PA

"My style is THRIFT-STORE CHIC! I buy vintage staples, and then mix in everyday items from the mall."

"I love to try on crazy hats in vintage stores—like with flowers and stuff—but I always end up with black. It's easy to pair with everything."

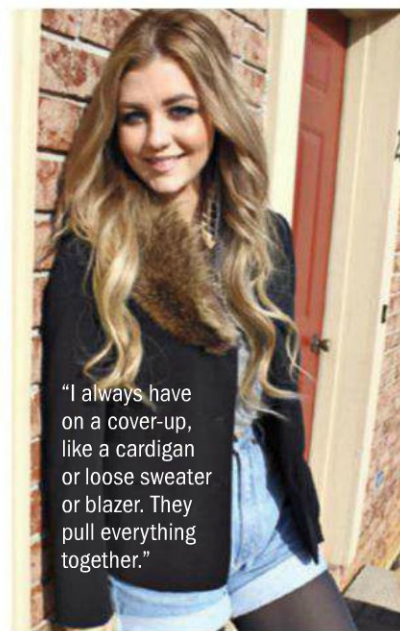

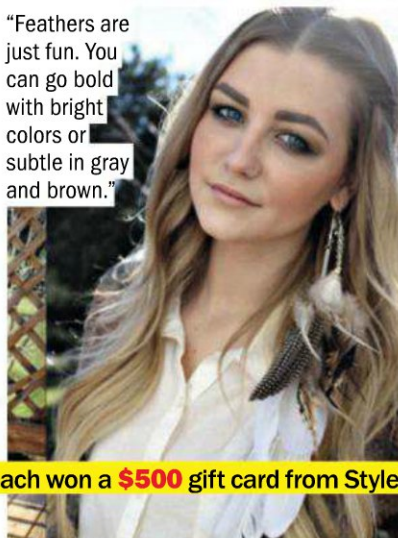

MY ACCESSORY OBSESSION

"I'm a shoe girl. People look at me funny because I wear five-inch heels just to run errands!"

heels
Sizes 6-10, Jeffrey
Campbell, $188,
lulus.com

"Feathers are just fun. You can go bold with bright colors or subtle in gray and brown."

"I always have on a cover-up, like a cardigan or loose sweater or blazer. They pull everything together."

Our new panel of fashion stars each won a $500 gift card from Style Council sponsor Aéropostale.

"My closet is overstuffed, so each season, I put my key picks on a rack in my room. Like right now, it's spring dresses! It looks pretty, and helps me get dressed in the morning!"

MY ACCESSORY OBSESSION "A collar necklace is one of those pieces that totally changes the look of your outfit."

meet OLIVIA!

fashionsalade.com/lusttforlife age: 19 hometown: Orange County, CA

"I'm all about DRAMA with bold statement pieces. I try to be my own muse!"

"My style is a combination of high-end European and laid-back California cool."

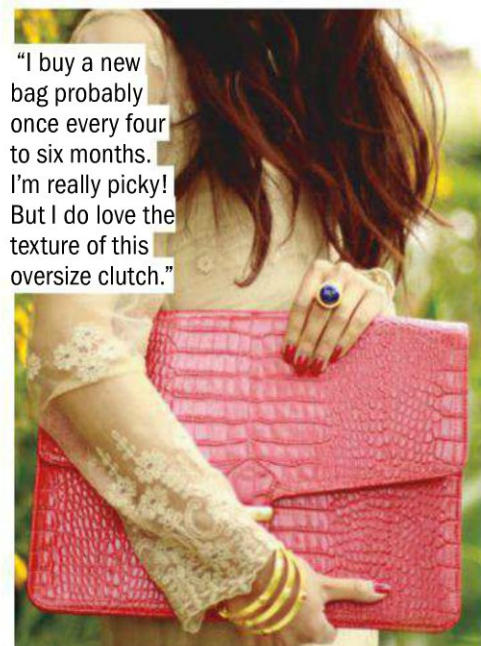

"I really like mixing textures and experimenting as I go. I admire Olivia Palermo's style and the way she pairs things that never look like they should go together."

MY SPRING MUST-HAVE

"High-waisted shorts! The fit is tailored, which I like, but the bright red makes them playful."

shorts
Sizes 2-12, H&M, $25, H&M stores

"I buy a new bag probably once every four to six months. I'm really picky! But I do love the texture of this oversize clutch."

"If I'm going to do an all-black outfit, I need to add a pop with the shoes. They keep it from being boring."

MY ACCESSORY OBSESSION "I'm definitely a heels girl, but it's not so convenient for class. These loafers are cool and comfy."

age: 20 hometown: Clearwater, FL

"Moving to New York for school gave me my style: MINIMALISTIC, urban, edgy. Less is more!"

"My uniform all year-round is jean shorts and red lipstick!"

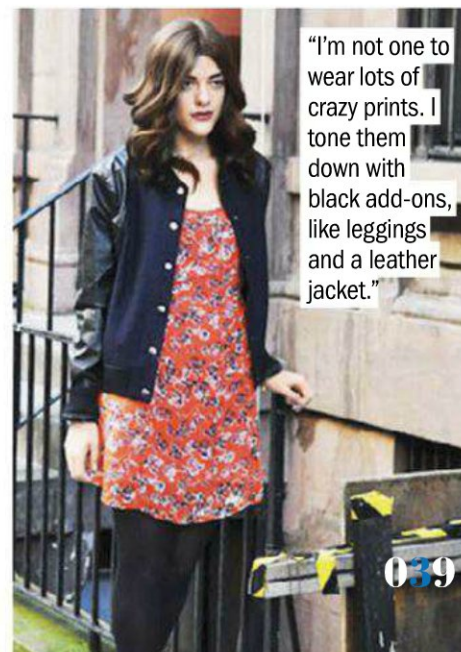

"I got this sweater at a store that updates vintage clothes. Here they added some spikes and paisley fabric."

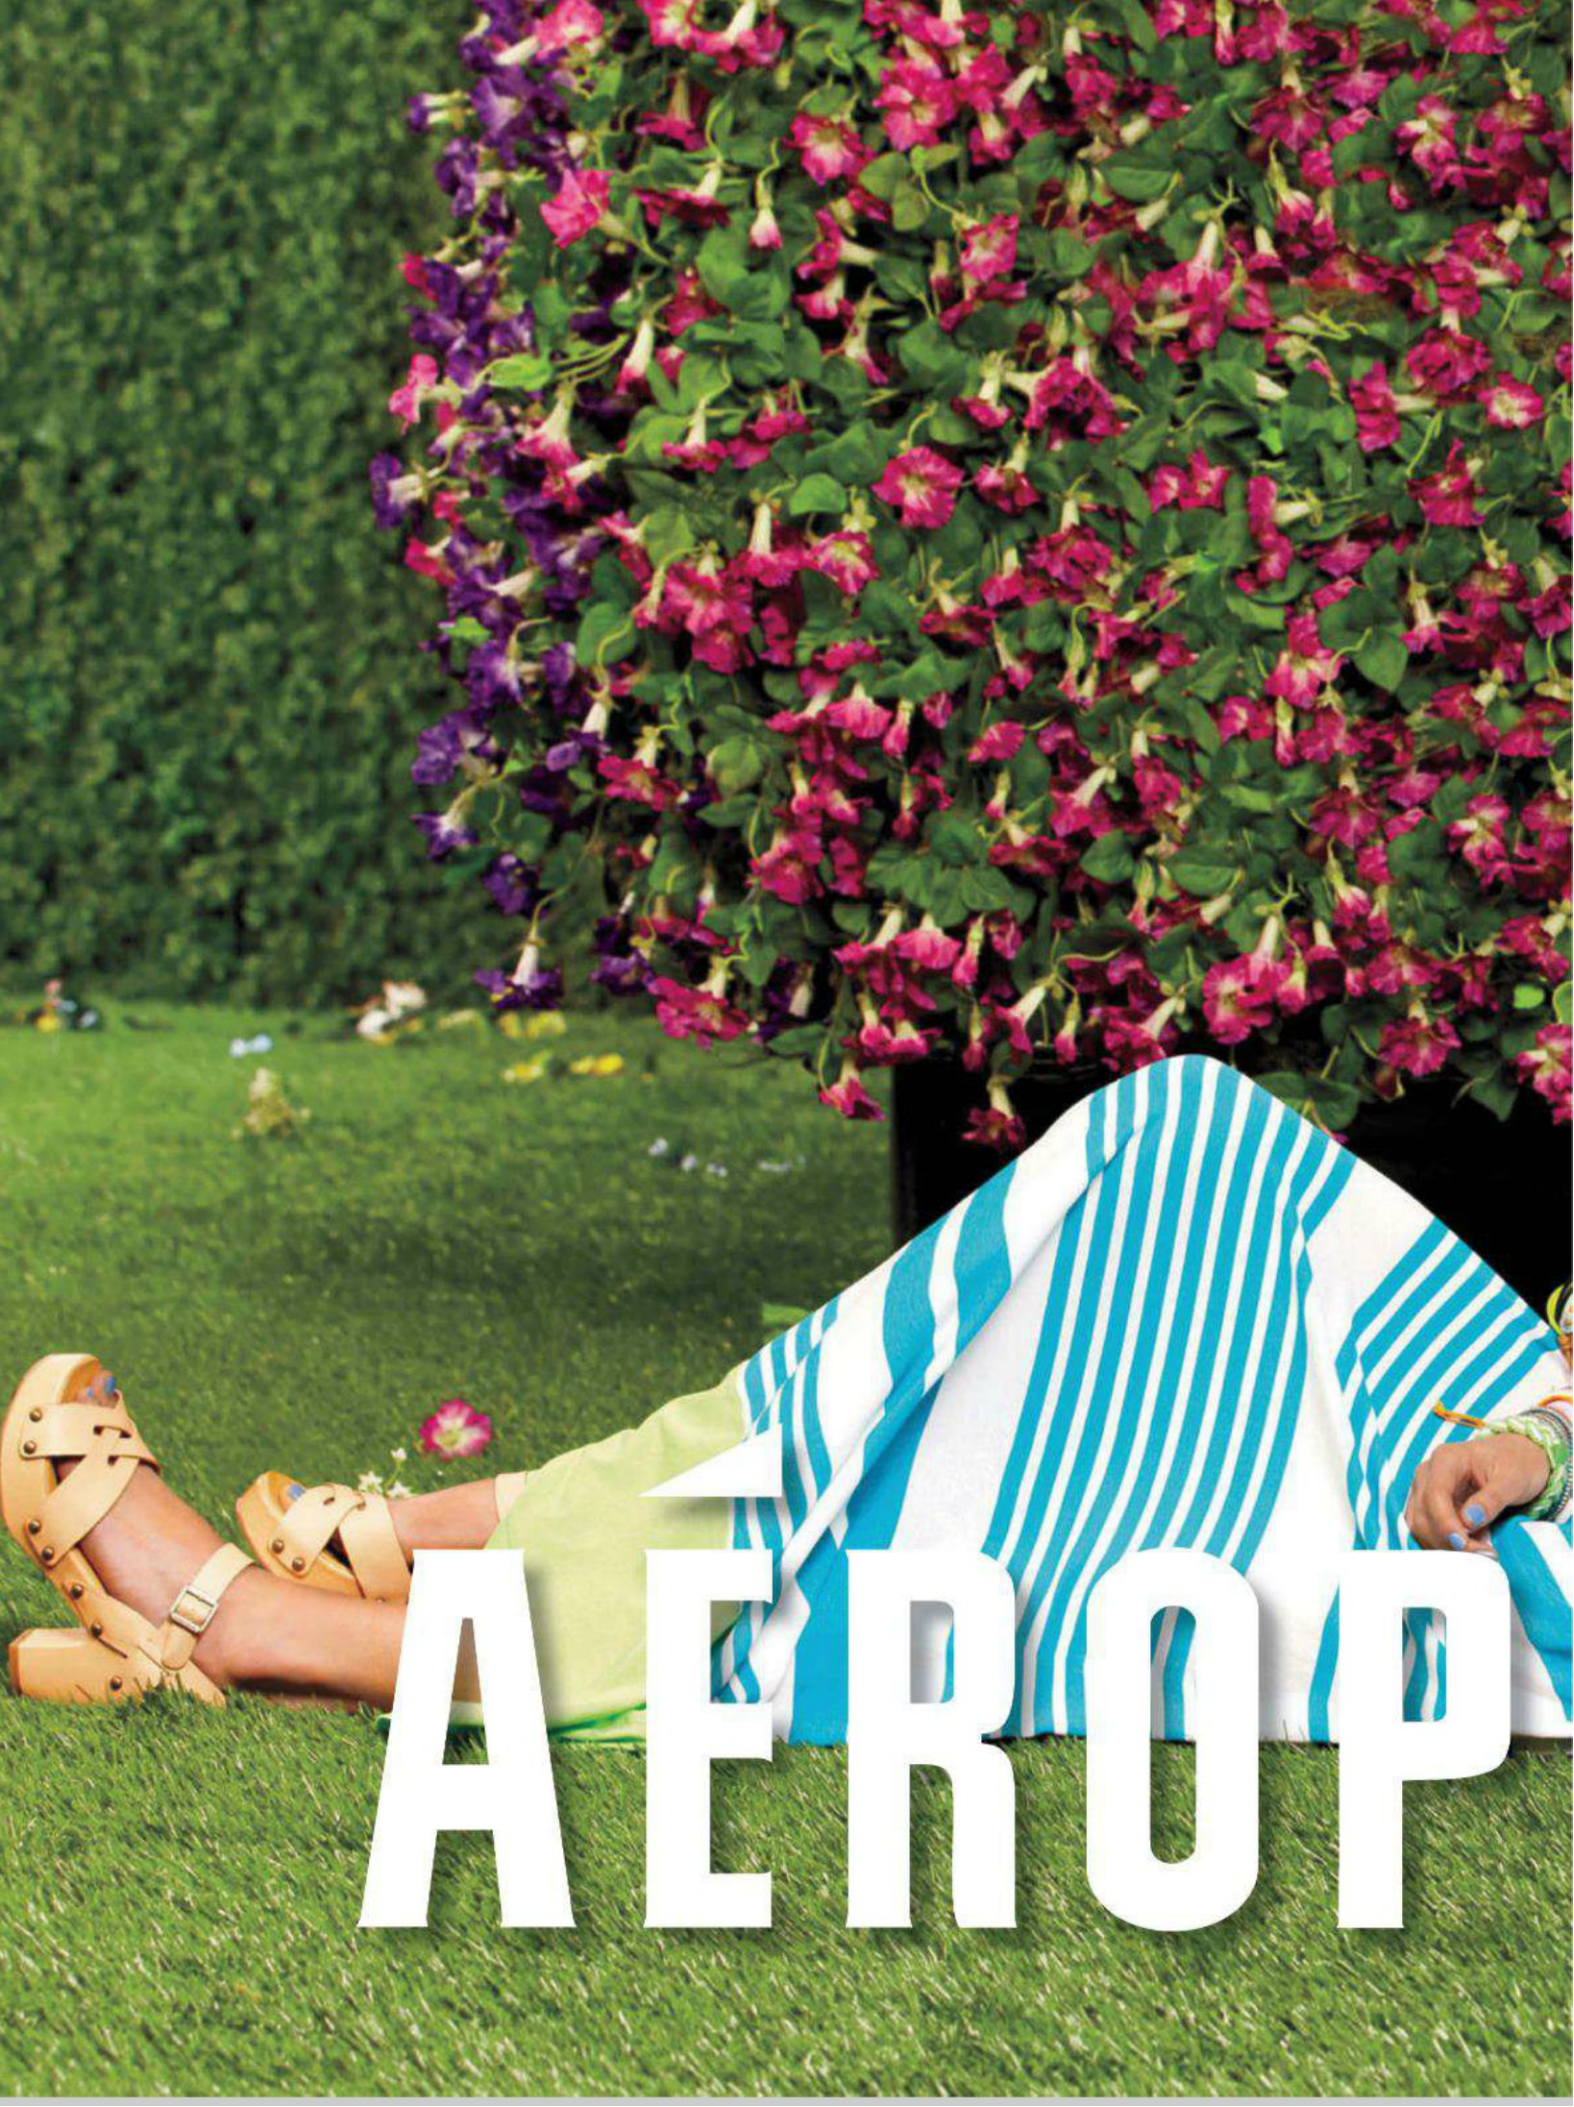

sweater
 Sizes XS–L, Levi's, $68, Levi's stores and levi.com

MY SPRING MUST-HAVE

"I love loose knit sweaters, and this one is a great color. I'll pair it with one of my simple gray dresses to liven it up a bit."

"I'm not one to wear lots of crazy prints. I tone them down with black add-ons, like leggings and a leather jacket."

meet NATALIE!

fashionbynatxo.tumblr.com

age: 15 hometown: Charlotte, NC

"I like to DRESS UP yet be UNEXPECTED. I want people to think, How did she pick that out?"

"I've had this skirt for a while, and pairing it with a pastel shirt felt too typical. Lace is so trendy, so they work together."

"I try to mix patterns, but it's so hard! I pick a color scheme or add in a neutral print, like this skirt."

MY ACCESSORY OBSESSION

"Fringe is back! This bag is such an attention-grabber, especially in the cool color."

bag Lulu's, $51,
lulus.com

"If I can't find the right outfit, I stick to a dress. I look for cool patterns, like this one. I like them to be a bold centerpiece."

MY WEEKEND STAPLE

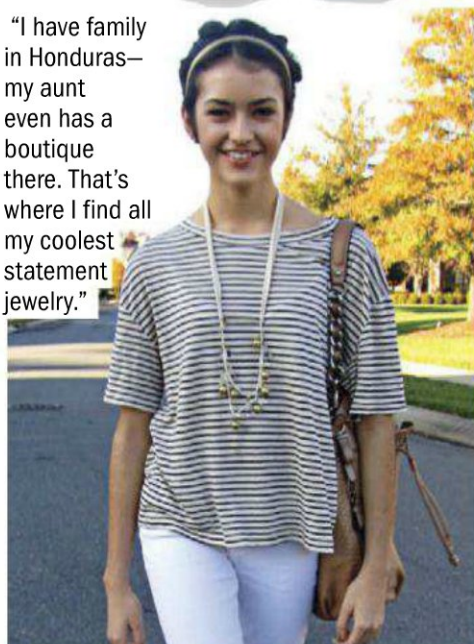

"Wide-leg jeans are a nice change from skinnies. I'll wear them with a loose top, but not so flowy that it's like a '70s costume."

jeans

Sizes 00-14, Aéropostale, $27, Aéropostale stores and aeropostale.com

"I have family in Honduras—my aunt even has a boutique there. That's where I find all my coolest statement jewelry."

"I try to dress for my body: My legs look best when the hem is slightly above midthigh, and I love showing off my arms because they're naturally a nice shape."

MY ACCESSORY OBSESSION

"Hidden platforms are great because they're designed in a way that your feet never feel tired!"

booties

Sizes 6–10, Hendrick Brun, $149, hendrickbrun.com blouse

Sizes XS–L, Lily White, $36, Nordstrom

MY WEEKEND STAPLE

"I like oversize shirts (I sometimes borrow from my dad!) tucked into skinny jeans, plus a crazy belt."

meet DIANDRA!

diandra-rose.tumblr.com

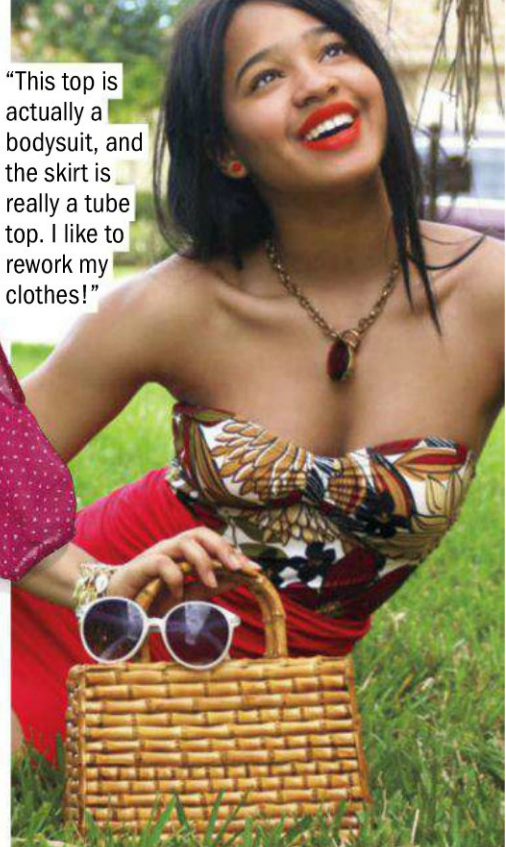

age: 17 hometown: Estero, FL

"Once it's spring, I have to have something SUPER-BRIGHT! It always lightens the mood."

"I like dressy shorts: sequined, chiffon, or printed. This pair is one of my favorites ever—love the floral!"

"This top is actually a bodysuit, and the skirt is really a tube top. I like to rework my clothes!"

MY SPRING MUST-HAVE

"When an outfit is missing a little something, a major bag always pulls it together!"

bag
Rachel Rachel Roy, $99, Macy's and rachelroy.com

"When I go shopping, I look for something that stands out. I want the feeling that I can see myself in the item forever."

WHAT YOU NEED:

black fabric spray paint

lace shorts

glue gun

1 Starting at the hem of the shorts, spray black fabric paint about four inches up.

2 Add extra coats of paint closer to the hem and keep the top totally clean.

3 Repeat spraying, concentrating more on the bottom, until you reach the desired ombré effect.

beaded wedges

WHAT YOU NEED:

colorful beads bright wedges

string

1 Cut five 10-inch strands of string, and knot together two inches from one end.

2 Thread a row of different colored beads on each of the five strands. Then knot together at the other end, again leaving two inches extra on the end.

3 Tie the ends without beads to the ankle straps of your wedges. The strands should drape to the middle of your foot.

The best outfits work double-duty—they look super-chic and totally transform your figure!

Naya Rivera

slim your middle!

An awesome optical illusion: When you pick a loose top that ends at the tiniest part of your bod, it makes your waist totally teensy.

Lily Collins

create an hourglass!

A circle skirt adds volume to hips and also nips in your waist—the bustier top gives your bust a boost, too!

Zoë Kravitz

look taller!

A high-waisted maxiskirt works like stilts (especially with a long stretch of leg from that slit)!

Amber Riley

flatter your curves!

The deep V-neck shows off killer cleavage (but the thick straps give support!), and the ruching shrinks your waist!

Chloë Grace Moretz

lengthen your legs!

Pairing a super-covered top with a miniskirt and strappy sandals puts all the attention on your lovely legs.

FLIRTY ROLLS

HOW-TO: This season, twists are the new braids! On one side of your part, roll back the hair along your hairline. Apply texturizing wax as you go to help hold the style, and pin into place behind your ear. Repeat on the opposite side.

try: Herbal Essences Set Me Up Texturizing Wax, $5, drugstores

TOPKNOT TWIST

HOW-TO: A sky-high style feels very high fashion! Make a pony at your crown. Spritz the tail with shaping spray and twist it to the left. Secure with pins one-third of the way down. Then twist in the opposite direction and secure again. Leave the ends loose for a cool undone effect.

try: Rusk Deep Shine Oil Strong Hold Shaping Hairspray, $15, ULTA stores; Sta-Rite Bobby Pins in Bronze, $2 for pack of 60, sallybeauty.com

wednesday

SLEEK SIDE-PONY

HOW-TO: As seen on the runway at Erin Fetherston! Apply a straightening balm to damp hair and blow it out straight. Gather hair all the way over to one side so it falls over your ear, and secure it low to line up with your jawline.

try: TIGI Catwalk Sleek Mystique Blow Out Balm, $20, catwalkbytigi.com for salons

SOFT TEXTURE

HOW-TO: For date night, a slightly disheveled updo (like this one from the Rachel Zoe's Fashion Week show) has the right amount of romance. Scrunch a curl cream into your hair, and dry with a diffuser to get soft texture. Middle-part hair and pull it back into a low, messy bun. Leave a few face-framing pieces out in front.

try: Herbal Essences Totally Twisted Curl Define & Hold Crème, $5, drugstores

PRETTY PINS

HOW-TO: A pop of bright white pins turns a laid-back style into a look. Blow-dry your hair, using a large round brush to add volume and give your ends a slight bend. Then side-part your hair and stack four bobby pins along your hairline.

try: Conair Gel Grip Round Brush, $7, drugstores; MetaGrip Premium Mini Bob Pins in White, $3 for pack of 36, sallybeauty.com

CORKSCREW CURLS

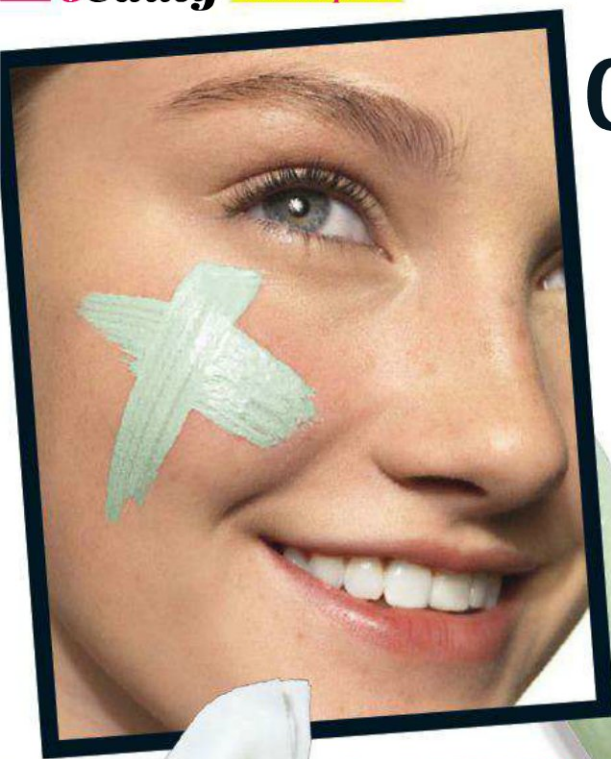

HOW-TO: Give your go-to style a total makeover with tons of glam spirals, like at Oscar de la Renta. For tight curls, wind one-inch sections of hair around a small-barrel clamp-free curling iron. Repeat until all your hair is curled; lightly brush out for fullness. Finish by pinning back the top half.

BY SPRING BREAK!

If you haven't joined Team Seventeen yet, it's not too late! This month's workout will give you major results—just in time for the beach!

OPEN FOR YOUR MONTH #2 WORKOUT

stick with it!

Everyone feels lazy, sore, or just too busy to exercise once in a while, but these girls have tricks to keep you going strong.

BORED WITH EXERCISE?

"When the thought of doing even a single lap or rep makes you groan, grab a friend to be your workout buddy and play a game like 'Would You Rather?' while you exercise. Thinking hard to come up with clever questions—and laughing the whole time—takes your mind off what your body is doing!"

1

TOE TAPS

FOR:
cardio, speed
& agility

Stand with a step in front of you. Tap the balls of your feet on top of it, one at a time, as fast as possible. (Pretend the step is hot!) Do this for 60 seconds.

LATERAL-REVERSE LUNGE

FOR:
firm butt &
inner thighs

Sabornée, 17, is a varsity cheerleader!

- a Stand with feet hip-width apart.
- b Lunge to the right with feet facing forward, until right knee is bent at 90° and left leg is straight.
- c Return to start, then step back into a lunge with right leg, until left leg is bent at 90°. Return to start. Do 10 reps, then repeat on other side.

2

BOX HOPS

FOR: cardio, speed
& agility

Stand to the right of a step. Push off both feet to jump up and land softly on top, then jump off to the other side. Repeat in the opposite direction. Keep going for 60 seconds!

BURPEES

FOR:
strong chest,
arms & core

- a With feet together, crouch down and place hands on the floor.
- b Kick both feet back into a push-up position, then jump them back to start.
- c From the crouched position, leap up as high as possible with your arms overhead. Do 10 reps.

3

JUMP ROPE

FOR: cardio & speed

Jump softly on the balls of your feet for 60 seconds. Make the jumps as small as possible without getting caught on the rope, and keep your hands slightly above your waistline!

ONE-LEG DUMBBELL DEADLIFT

FOR:
tight butt, thighs,
back & core

Tip: For awesome balance, focus here on keeping your weight in your right heel!

- a Stand with feet together and a 5-pound dumbbell in each hand. Lift left foot behind you so it's just slightly off the floor.
- b Bend forward at hips, extending left leg back, balancing on right leg as you keep torso steady and back flat. Stop when torso and left leg are parallel to floor, then slowly return to start. Do 10 reps; repeat on other side.

minutes!

These multitasking moves are the secret to spring break confidence. You'll get stronger and tighter from head to toe!

BENCH PUSH-UPS

FOR:
toned chest, arms,
shoulders & core

- a Start with hands on a bench beneath you (slightly wider than shoulder-width apart) and legs extended out straight.
- b Bend elbows to lower body until your chest is about two inches from bench. Slowly push back to start. Do 10 reps.

LEG RAISE WITH HIP-UPS

FOR:
flat abs

- a Lie on back with legs straight and arms by your sides.
- b Raise legs, slightly bent, off the ground until perpendicular to the floor.
- c Lift hips off the floor to drive legs toward the ceiling. Slowly return to start. Do 10 reps.

V-TWIST

FOR:
trim
waist

TIP: If this starts to feel easy, try lifting your feet off the ground an inch or two!

- a Sit on floor, knees bent at 90°, and lean back slightly. Extend arms straight out, hands together.
- b Keeping lower body still, twist torso as far as you can to the right.
- c Reverse the movement, twisting left. That's one rep. Do 10.

YOUR WEEKLY PLAN!

Make your muscles go ahhhh after a hard workout. Your trainer, Adam Sprein, is sharing a set of the best-ever total body stretches at seventeen.com/team17!

the truth about losing weight

Jordin Sparks shares what it's really like to watch your body transform—and how to keep the peace when it does.

"When I got pneumonia at the end of 2010, I couldn't even walk a few feet without getting winded. I hated feeling so weak, and that's when it clicked. If I wanted to feel stronger, inside and out, I had to make eating right and exercising a priority—and so I did. I ended up losing 30 pounds over the next year, but the real payoff was learning how amazing it feels to treat my body right. Focusing on that feeling, and understanding a few myths about weight loss, are the keys to keeping Body Peace." —Jordin Sparks

MYTH #1:

It will change your life.

"Sometimes you think that if you lose weight, the bullies won't have anything to tease you about. Or that boy will finally like you. But weight loss won't erase your problems or make you instantly confident. You're still going to be the same person you were before, so make sure you're doing it to be as strong as you can be, or feel the best that you can feel—otherwise, you're setting yourself up for disappointment."

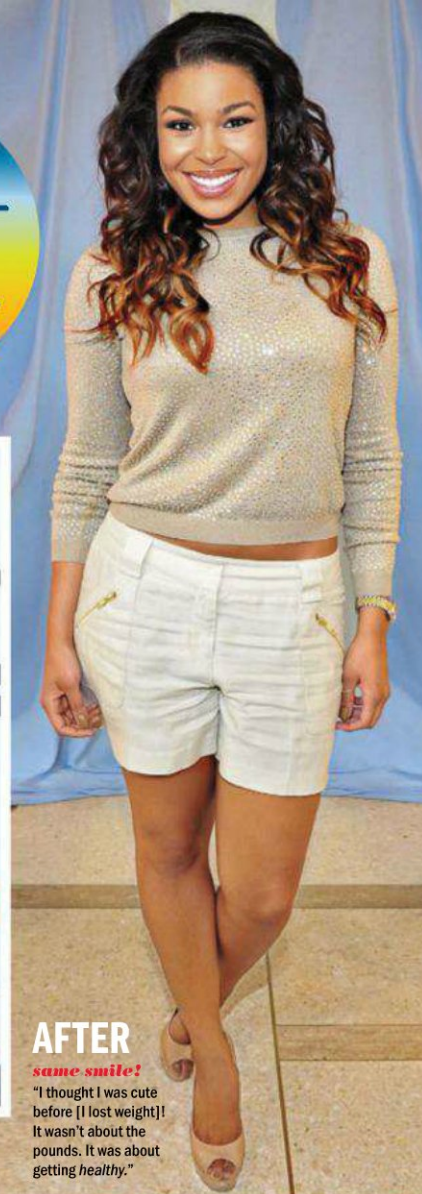

MYTH #2:

It will be fast and easy.

"Weight loss can, and probably will, be a slow process. But there are ways to push through the tough parts. I've tried to be healthier in the past, but I owe my success this time around to changing my thinking. Before, working out was something I felt forced to do; this time, I found exercise that I loved doing, like Zumba—so I kept doing it! Then the physical changes started to come little by little, on their own."

BEFORE

same smile!
"I thought I was cute before [I lost weight]! It wasn't about the pounds. It was about getting healthy."

MYTH #3:

You'll love the attention.

"When your body changes, the flattering remarks can get confusing: If they're making such a big deal about how I look now . . . did I look bad before? In those moments, I find it helps to smile, say thanks . . . and then think about the other reasons I'm awesome (like how I can always make people laugh!) to take the focus off my body."

MYTH #4:

Everyone will cheer you on.

"After I lost weight, I got a lot of really mean comments online, like: You'll still never look as good as so-and-so. Or: Losing weight didn't change your ugly face. Every single one of them hurt, but it helped to remind myself that those people were probably dealing with their own body insecurities—and cutting me down was their twisted way to build themselves up."

SIGN THE BodyPeace TREATY!

It's complicated
In The Descendants, Alexandra (Shailene Woodley) and her family prove that everyone deals with death differently.

good grief

If someone you know dies, you usually have to let yourself hurt to heal.
Here's help sorting through all of those feelings.

WHAT TO EXPECT

that day

There's no "right" way to feel when you get such bad news—you may suddenly sob, but you may also feel shock or numbness. It takes some people a little longer to process a death, and that's okay.

the funeral

You're hurting—and so is everyone around you at the funeral. But when you're all together, honoring the person you lost and allowing yourself to experience all the painful emotions, it actually begins the process that will ultimately make things better.

the weeks that follow

You may already feel mostly healed, but for others, it takes longer. You might not be able to concentrate in class. You might flip out on friends for no reason. You might even have physical symptoms, like shortness of breath or trouble sleeping. Anger, confusion, resentment of those who aren't suffering like you are—it's all normal, so be patient with yourself and others at this stage.

a few months later

Most people still miss the person terribly, but the crushing grief symptoms start to let up. So if you're still distracted by your loss on a daily basis, it may be time to talk to a counselor, who can help you figure out ways to go on living without feeling guilty about it. (Go to adec.org, which allows you to search for one in your area.)

the future

Even though you've moved on, you'll still be hit with a flash of grief every now and again. When that happens, give yourself time to look at photos or listen to music and cry—and ignore the people who say, "You should be over it by now," because that's just not true.

how to deal

I've been lucky enough to have never suffered a personal loss, so I asked readers how they are able to #STAYSTRONG.

Demi Lovato

(Seventeen contributing editor)

Honor the person.

In memory of her mom's battle against cancer, Cassandra, 19, wears a bracelet that she had engraved with "A lover and a fighter." It makes her feel like her mom is always there with her.

Express your emotions.

Lex, 17, wrote a poem for her godfather, then put it on his coffin at the funeral. Telling him everything she didn't have a chance to tell him before he died was a huge comfort.

Take action.

After Julia, 21, lost a friend and a cousin to suicide, she held a walk in their memory to benefit suicide prevention. She liked knowing that something positive came out of the pain.

what do you say to a friend?

Keeping it simple is best. Tell her:

"I know I can't truly understand how you're feeling, but I'm sorry for your loss, and all I can hope is that it gets better."

Love

have your hottest SPRING BREAK!

(no beach necessary!)

No matter where you're going for break, there will be hot guys. Find out the coolest, easiest ways to say hi.

BY ELISA BENSON

talk to any guy!

You have only a week to make your move, so don't waste a second. Here's what to say in any situation.

IF HE'S:

OUT AT A CLUB

SAY:

"I told my friend you were cute, so she dared me to say hi."

At a dark club with pounding music, you have to be one step braver than you usually are. This flirty line is just the trick—there's no way he won't be flattered!

IF HE'S:

ON YOUR VOLUNTEER TRIP

SAY:

"You're a pro! Have you done this before?"

You share an interest in giving back, so use it to jump-start a convo. Then ask if he wants to head to dinner afterward—a no-pressure way to spend more time together.

IF HE'S:

AT THE SNACK STAND

SAY:

"So what's good here?"

Turn your chat about pizza rolls into a larger conversation about fun stuff to do in the area. Then add, "I'm in town with my friends. We should all go as a group!"

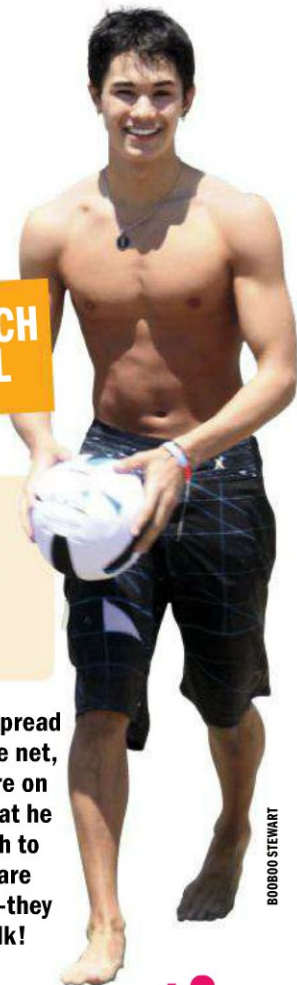

IF HE'S:

PLAYING BEACH VOLLEYBALL

SAY:

"Can we get in on the next game?"

Grab your friends and spread out on both sides of the net, so that some of you are on his team. Then joke that he might be good enough to back you up. Dudes are naturally competitive—they love a little trash talk!

BOOBDO STEWART

SPOT A PLAYER

You want a hot vacay fling—not a gross vacay creeper. These are telltale signs that he's sketchy.

- He's on his own. If he ditches his friends to hit on you, he's probably focused on racking up as many girls as he can. Ew.
- He heaps on the compliments. If he skips the normal friendly banter and goes straight into flirting ("You're so beautiful"), he's trying to fast-forward to the hookup action.
- He wants to seal the deal. A guy on a booty crawl will push you to hang out that night—he won't waste time setting up date-y plans for tomorrow.

shade report!

You don't need to make eye contact to know who's really behind those sunglasses.

BRUNO MARS

AVIATORS = MATURE

These classic frames mean he's a bit reserved, so ask questions to open him up. He wants a girl he can really talk to.

LIAM HEMSWORTH

WAYFARERS = COOL

He's confident in his style and his moves. He won't be afraid to lean in for a sexy first kiss!

DARREN CRISS

NEON = FUN

Silly sunnies are a sign that he doesn't take himself too seriously—he's always the life of the party. You'll have a blast!

REDFOO FROM LMFAO

TRENDY = TRY-HARD

Beware: He's into showing off, not in getting to know you. And try-hard guys are usually boring kissers!

“our love changed the school”

Rebeca and her girlfriend had always been proud of their relationship—but now they have something even greater to celebrate. as told to elisa benson

Standing backstage at the all-school pep rally, I was terrified. The principal of our high school in San Diego, California, was about to announce homecoming king. I'd never planned to be the first girl running for the spot, but over the past few weeks, all my friends could talk about was how cool it would be if my girlfriend, Haileigh, and I were nominated for court, and so they all slotted me in for king. (There was no gender neutral option on the ballot.) Now that it had actually happened, I wanted to win so badly that my whole body was tense. What if everyone booed? I thought. Then another nominee—the senior guy who'd been on homecoming court every year of high school—turned to me. “You and Haileigh deserve this,” he said. The principal called my name and the crowd exploded into cheers. People I didn't even know waved signs with my name. I was so dizzy with happiness that I thought I might faint! I searched the crowd for Haileigh and she was smiling so big. The next day at the school dance, she was crowned homecoming queen and we slow danced as everyone watched. Haileigh and I had always felt 100 percent certain about our love for each other—but this was the first time we realized our whole school supported it, too. I was flooded with happiness, but I also felt an amazing sense of accomplishment. We were the first lesbian homecoming king and queen in US history!

Haileigh caught my eye for the first time in English our sophomore year. I was blown away by how brilliant she was, and the weird way that everything she said in class was exactly what I was thinking, only 10 times smarter. When I looked her up on Facebook and saw that she listed herself as gay, I felt a little burst of hope in my heart. I sent her a friend request. We chatted over Facebook until I finally got up the nerve to ask her to hang out. We went shopping and talked about our families, our favorite bands, and how we both love to knit (random!). The entire time I was thinking, I can't believe I'm here with her! At the end of the date, we both just knew this was the beginning of something real.

At the start of senior year, we'd been together for nearly two years. We were okay with being out at school, but it put status check

On Glee, Santana was nervous about coming out as a lesbian—until she realized how many people had her back.

us in the minority—we were outsiders. So when our friends rallied around the idea of voting us onto homecoming court, we never thought it would happen—king and queen were a big deal at our school. Then the nominations were announced, and something unexpected happened: People from every clique at school—freshmen, cheerleaders, jocks, and drama kids—came up to me and offered support. “I think it's so cool what you're doing,” one cheerleader said. We realized this had become much bigger than we'd ever imagined!

After we won, some of the newspapers ran stories that focused on us—but I think they should have focused on our school. Haileigh and I were the faces of change, but it was our school that made the statement that everyone should support the LGBTQ community. I'll never forget the experience of getting such a huge honor alongside the person I love, but you don't need to be on homecoming court to feel proud of your relationship. It's the other way around: When you're not afraid to be proud, you can change the world. As for Haileigh and me, I know it's kind of silly to say at 17 that you know you'll be with someone forever—but right now, I definitely feel that way. 17

SNEAKY WAYS TO TELL...

he's secretly over you

Guys can be babies about breakups. Is your guy dragging things out instead of cutting the cord?

by elisa benson

✓ He's on his own sched.

Think about it: Last time you hung out, was it with his friends? And was the last movie you saw one he wanted to see? A guy who's losing interest might still loop you into plans, but he won't carve out special time just for you.

✓ He skips the greeting.

He made you smile whenever he'd text you, "Hey, beautiful." But now his messages are to the point. ("You going out?") When he talks to you in the same way he talks to his buddies, you're on a fast track to friendville.

✓ He's faking it in photos.

Check last night's pics of you guys together. Is he smiling without any teeth? Are his eyes sort of . . . empty? A fakey face is a clue that he's feeling ambivalent about your relationship.

TURN IT AROUND!

“When things were rocky with my girlfriend, she brought me a scrapbook filled with love notes from when we'd started dating. Reading it reminded me why I fell for her in the first place—and made me want to fix things, not give up.”

weird hookup behaviors explained

As soon as you think you have your guy figured out, he does something totally WTF.

THE WEIRDNESS

After a few fun hookups, he suddenly goes MIA.

THE EXPLANATION

HIS FEELINGS CHANGED.

“Guys can be extremely passionate in the moment, but after the hormones fade, we step back and think, Did I really want that to happen? If he's not feeling it anymore, he'll drop off the face of the earth to avoid having to turn you down in person.”

-MAC, 21, STATE COLLEGE, PA

He seems to like kissing, but the makeout never goes any further.

HE REALLY LIKES YOU.

“The idea that guys always want action is a stereotype. If he likes you, he'll want to take things slowly and build a relationship that's more than just physical stuff. It's a good thing!”

-MITCH, 19, SADDLE BROOK, NJ

He flirts with me all night but then doesn't try to make a move.

HE'S ON THE FENCE.

“There are two possibilities: He's either just into the thrill of the chase, or he's shy. Your best bet is to tone down the flirting. If he wants a chase, it will keep him intrigued. If he's nervous, he'll feel less intimidated. Either way, you win!”

-JUSTUS, 18, ALLENTOWN, PA

He's dated other girls before, but he's still a sloppy kisser!

HE'S CLUELESS!

“Don't assume that he knows what he's doing just because he's 'experienced.' Pinpoint one thing you don't like about his kissing and say, 'Try this instead. . . .' He just needs a coach who can guide him without shattering his ego!”

-DIYDAN, 18, SEATTLE, WA

“i was carjacked at the mall!”

Chelsea, 19, didn't think twice about heading into the parking lot solo—until her car was stolen with her in it! as told to claudine ko “Don’t scream or I’ll kill you.” I never thought in a million years I’d hear those words and end up running for my life as if I were in a horror movie. I’d been at the mall with my friends, about a 30-minute drive from my home outside of Portland, Oregon. After a couple hours of shopping, I took a break to bring our bags to the car—big mistake!

surprise attack!

It was the middle of the day, so the open-air garage was full and very bright. About five feet from the car, I heard someone behind me and glanced back. There was this guy—he was tall and kind of heavy with blond hair—but he was far enough from me that I didn’t think anything of it. I left the car door wide-open as I sat and put the bags behind the driver’s seat. When I turned back around, he was right in front of me, pointing a four-inch hunting knife at my face! He shoved me full-force to the passenger side, slicing my arm, and then growled, “Don’t scream or I’ll kill you.” My heart felt as if it were going to pound out of my chest, but I was too scared to say a word. He took the car keys and pulled out of the space. Just then I saw my sister Amanda walking toward the car, making a face, like, What are you doing? I mouthed, “Help me.” It took her only a second to reach the driver’s side window, but he slammed on the gas. I could hear her screaming as we sped away.

kidnapped

As he screeched down the street, recklessly passing cars, I kept quiet but studied him out of the corner of my eye—I knew I’d need a description for the police. His eyes were bloodshot and he was shaking. He was driving as if he wanted to get away from something, so I thought he just wanted the car. A few minutes later, we turned onto a gravel road. I had no idea where we were and I started to feel more vulnerable. “Do you think anyone lives up here?” he asked.

Suddenly I realized an abandoned road was exactly what he wanted! Assault, rape, death—it all hit me at once. I was in more trouble than I’d thought! I knew the door was unlocked and I could have jumped out, but I had put on my seat belt earlier, when he was careening down the road, and I didn’t want to make any sudden movements.

He slowed down as we approached the top of the hill—we were surrounded by pasture with barbwire fencing. The only building I could see was a massive home farther down the property. I knew I had to get to that house. I quietly asked him what he wanted. With one hand still on the wheel, he unbuckled his belt and unzipped his pants. Then I felt a massive impact on my face. He’d punched me! But there was so much adrenaline rushing through me that the pain didn’t really bother me. Instead, I got angry. I didn’t want to feel weak; I wanted to stand up for myself.

great escape

When we stopped at the top of the gravel road, I flung off my seat belt and he grabbed my arm. I shoved him off, threw open my door, jumped out, and landed face down, rolling in the dirt. I started running and kicked off my flip-flops—I knew they’d slow me down. I had road rash down my legs and arms, but at that point, everything still felt numb.

He immediately started chasing me, yelling, “Come back here, b*!” I ran track for a year, and it felt like I was jumping real-life hurdles as I sprinted over a fence and down the hill toward the house I’d seen. I kept saying to busted! When he attacked Chelsea, Shawn Griep (above) was wanted in California for parole violation and considered a fugitive.

myself, I will survive.

At the bottom, there were sticker bushes with a four-layered barbwire fence behind them. I looked back for the first time. He was behind me by about 30 feet. I had to move! I dove between the second and third rows of fence and tore my body out of the branches and wire, which left two huge gashes on my leg. The pain finally started to kick in, so I slowed to a jog.

As soon as I got to the front door of the house, I pushed it open—luckily, it was unlocked—and fell onto the floor inside. An older man was sitting on a couch, staring at me. I was breathing really hard, screaming, “Help! He’s trying to get me!” The man slammed the door behind me and told his wife to help me, and then they called the police. Soon it seemed like every cop in town was searching the property, but they couldn’t find my attacker. It all felt so unreal.

a big relief

Word got out immediately, because he’d actually tried to attack some maids at a motel before he ran off to the parking garage and found me. But it was a few weeks before the police finally called—they found the carjacker hiding in the closet of a house he was staying at near the mall and arrested him! I was so relieved to know he couldn’t come looking for me that I started crying. He’s in prison now, and I’m not scared of him anymore. I still have scars, but they don’t even bother me. I feel a lot stronger emotionally—I was not going to be a victim. When I look at those scars, they remind me that I’m my own hero. 17

EASY MONEY

money drama with mom & dad

Short on funds? These tips will help get you the cash you need—and keep the family peace.

Q: My parents told me they'd help pay for a spring break trip. Now they're saying it's "not in the budget." What should I do?

A: A little negotiation can go a long way. Suggest meeting in the middle—if they can afford half of what they promised, you'll work to cover the difference with extra babysitting jobs. It's your best shot. But the truth is, money is tight in a lot of families right now, and sometimes fun extras really aren't doable. If it's not in the cards this year, plan a fun staycation (turn to page 92 for ideas), or figure out how to get away on your own dime (bookit.com offers cheap spring break packages to places like Cancún and Daytona Beach).

Q: I borrowed my mom's credit card and spent more than I should have. Eep! Now she doesn't trust me. What do I do?

A: Those cute booties seemed so worth it in the store. Now that mom is PO'd? Not so much. Explain why you went overboard this one time (you'll wear them forever!) and ask for a chance to prove yourself by being responsible with your spending money. Make a budget each week, and show Mom receipts to prove you stuck to it. Owning—and learning from—your mistake will show her she can trust you.

free ride!

There are easy ways to get what you want. (No hitchhiking necessary!)

Q: I blew through my savings this month but just got a chance to go to South by Southwest. (Road trip!) How do I ask my parents for extra money?

A: If you're usually on top of your budget, now is the time to cash in on the goodwill that has earned you. Ask your parents for a "loan," and then show initiative by telling them you'll work it off by helping around the house or doing errands. They'll be more likely to help if they're getting something out of it, instead of just bailing your butt out of debt!

how can you help mom and dad?

When your parents try to shield you from their money worries, it's easy to imagine the worst. But instead of feeling guilty for every dollar you spend, have an honest chat with them—if you know where they stand, you can figure out your new budget together.

sex in college

So is everyone really doing it? The Freshman 15 set the record straight.

Melisa and her hot friend get really close at a party.

the boundaries are different.

“I used to think ‘hooking up’ meant making out—but now it means having sex. There’s an expectation that things move faster in college. One time I brought a guy back to my dorm room, just to kiss a little, but he acted as if it was obvious we’d be spending the night together. He kept saying, ‘I’m sleeping in your bed tonight.’ I had no problem telling him no, but it made me realize that guys assume sex is an option, even the first time you hook up. Make sure you know what you want beforehand, so you can put on the breaks if you need to.”

the freedom is fun!

“In college, there are no rules, no curfew, no parents—you make your own decisions, including about sex. With the right guy, that can be exciting and fun! In high school, everyone was judgmental about who was doing it and who wasn’t. In college, the pressure of what other people think disappears.”

—kristin, DRAKE UNIVERSITY

random hookups are nbd.

“In high school, the only people I knew who were having sex were in relationships. In college, no one cares if you sleep with someone you’re not dating. What’s interesting, though, is that girls react differently to the casualness. Some of my friends think it’s exciting to fool around with a random person, but some have been crushed when a guy makes them feel special and then they realize it was a one-night stand.”

Sipping one of these tropical mocktails inspired by Crush nightclub at the Atlantis Resort in the Bahamas is the next best thing to being there!

WATERMELONTINI

HOW-TO:

First, run a lime wedge around the edge of a glass to moisten it, then dip it in sugar to create a sugared rim. Add a half cup of watermelon soda and a splash of cranberry juice, then top off with Sprite and a squeeze of lime juice.

CITRUS FUSION

HOW-TO:

Mix equal parts lemonade and Sprite on ice, then add a splash of pulp-free orange juice. Toss in a flower bud to make it extra pretty!

ALMOND JOY

HOW-TO:

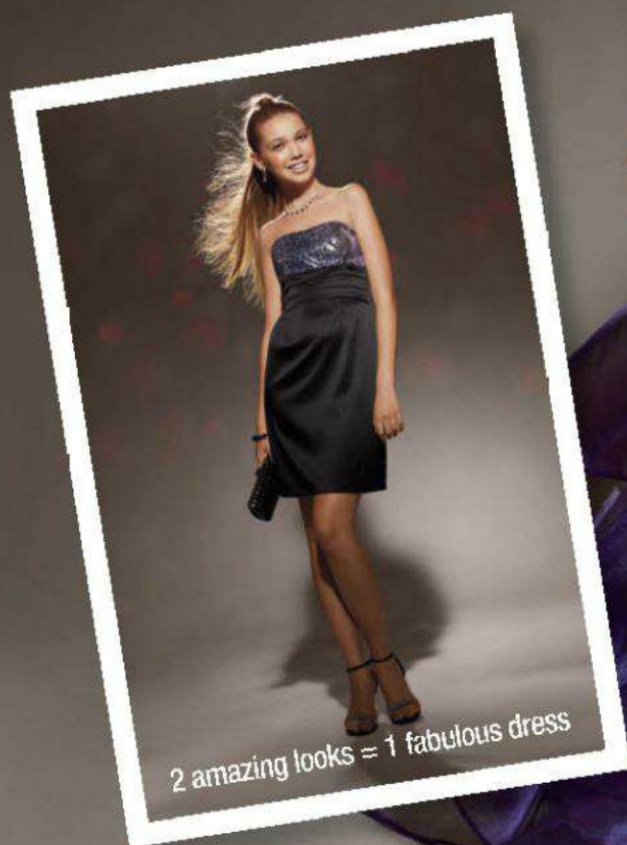

In a blender, mix a handful of ice with equal parts coconut milk and chocolate milk, a drop of almond extract, and a squeeze of chocolate syrup. Use a choco-covered pretzel stick to stir!

It's weird but true: Lily Collins's eyebrows seem to be just as famous as she is—if not more! Although Lily has already starred alongside Sandra Bullock in The Blind Side, Taylor Lautner in Abduction, and with Julia Roberts this month in Mirror Mirror, someone set up a Twitter account just for her eyebrows called @iamthebrows. “It used to bother me—having bigger, fuller brows,” she admits. “I even plucked them once so I’d fit in, but I hated them and couldn’t wait for them to grow back. Now I embrace them. I’ve realized the quirky things that make you different are what make you beautiful.”

It's that kind of beauty peace and inner confidence that has turned this 22-year-old from a girl with big dreams into someone who actually makes them happen. Lily was born in Surrey, England, but moved to Los Angeles, California, at 5 years old when her parents divorced. As a teen, all she wanted was to give girls her age a voice. So at just 15, she started pitching stories to teen magazines. After getting multiple bylines, Lily then decided she wanted to become the youngest talk-show host ever. She did her research and set meetings at major networks—then pitched them a show about the topics teens care about, like news, body image, and teen-parent relationships. While some girls would be shaking in their booties at the thought of presenting to a packed room of execs, Lily wasn't intimidated—she thought it was more awkward for the adults! “I think it must have been weird for this 16-year-old girl to walk in with pie charts and graphs,” says Lily. She didn't get the gig right away, but it didn't make her doubt herself. “I always took ‘no’ as ‘No, not right now,’ not ‘No, this isn't the right job for you.’” She was right: A few years later, she landed a spot as a Nickelodeon correspondent, interviewing everyone from the Democratic delegates in the 2008 presidential election to the Jonas Brothers on the Kids' Choice Awards preshow in 2009.

Next step in Lily's girl-power plan: to change the rules of modeling. She had always loved fashion, and would hit flea markets to find designer bargains. But at only five-feet-five, she didn't get bookings because she was “too short.” Rather than give up, she practiced until she could walk in six-inch heels to level the playing field against taller girls. She ultimately walked the runway for Tommy Hilfiger and ended up in the pages of British Vogue. She was even named International Model of the Year by Spain's Glamour in 2008.

But it's not her crazy list of achievements—or that she's the daughter of music legend Phil Collins—that makes her so cool. It's that she manages to be ambitious yet totally down-to-earth at the same time. “My last name may have opened doors, but I have to keep them open,” she says. It's that authenticity that attracted Taylor Lautner, who described her as “super-open and funny and goofy.” (The two reportedly dated for several months during their work together on Abduction.)

It may seem like she has the perfect life, but not everything has gone 100 percent smoothly for Lily—she was turned down for Jenny on Gossip Girl, the title character in Juno, and Shailene Woodley's part in The Descendants. “I look at auditions as acting class,” she says. “I had to learn that each one is its own experience that you take on to the next.” All those struggles were worth it—they helped her land the biggest role of her career: Snow White! Lily opened up to Seventeen about what it really takes to find confidence and follow your dreams.

I'M A FIRM BELIEVER THAT EVERYTHING

17: How does it feel to be considered one of Hollywood's hottest young actors?

Lily Collins: It's weird having been the one who used to interview people to now being the one getting interviewed. It's a complete honor to be among young women I've loved watching on screen—Emma Stone, Rooney Mara, Jennifer Lawrence, Shailene Woodley, Chloë [Grace] Moretz, and Elle Fanning are extremely talented. I like Lizzie Olsen, too. We did a small video project together in high school, and I ran into her recently, and it's like, “Wow, congrats on what you're doing!” And she's like, “Hey, congratulations to you too!” Of course there's competition. But at the end of the day, everybody really is happy for each other. It's a nice feeling.

17: Which is harder, being judged as an actor or for how you look as a model?

LC: I think it's more difficult as a girl growing up, and coming into her own, and being judged just on the way she looks. I got into modeling because I love fashion, I love makeup, and I love playing dress-up! But I've always been a strong advocate of girls' confidence and self-awareness. I've helped create programs and charities that go into open conversation about girls' body image.

17: What makes you a good friend?

LC: I'm a good listener. In high school I did a teen therapist program called Peer Support, and in that you're taught that sometimes all it takes is listening and asking the right questions for the other person to come up with an answer on her own—it's not always about giving advice. I think in today's world there is so much Tweeting, Facebook, and e-mails that face-to-face talking is a novelty.

17: What were you like in high school?

LC: I was a floater; I didn't have a specific group. What I loved so much about my school is everyone had her own things going on. You're creative in an artsy area or you do sports or science, but everyone respected and appreciated everyone else's talent. I never felt there was that kind of cliquey nature.

17: Who is your celeb crush?

LC: It's weird to have celebrity crushes now because I could actually meet them or work with them! When I was younger, it was definitely Leonardo DiCaprio in Titanic. I had pictures of him and I had 'NSYNC posters. I had the biggest crush on Justin Timberlake!

17: Taylor Lautner talked about having great chemistry when you two auditioned together. Did you feel it too?

LC: It's called a chemistry read. Obviously they want to see if you have it or not. So when you go into one with somebody, it can be awkward, but Taylor completely made everything feel very, very comfortable. He's a talented actor and a gentleman.

17: What do you think makes him a good leading man?

LC: Taylor is very humble. He has so many fans and he never forgets that. He really appreciates the support that he's gotten through the years and he gives it right back—to me, that makes a good leading man.

17: Armie Hammer plays your prince in Mirror Mirror. Who's your idea of a real-life Prince Charming?

LC: Somebody who can make me laugh at the drop of a hat, and is an old-school gentleman, who sweeps me off my feet in a quirky way, either by writing me a letter or surprising me. I like someone I can have a really fun time with and be extremely goofy with, but at the same time have a serious conversation with.

17: What are your relationship deal breakers?

LC: Somebody who's not open-minded. I love talking to new people and hearing different perspectives and formulating my own ideas based on conversations. I don't know how I'd be able to have a conversation with somebody if they're not willing to listen.

17: What's the best love advice you've ever received?

LC: You need to go into a relationship knowing who you are, and being confident in who you are, and bringing yourself to the table. And not going into [a relationship] trying to change somebody is really important as well. A relationship is meant to bring out the best side in you and to add excitement to your life.

17: What do you wish you could tell your 17-year-old self now?

LC: I think when you go to high school, and you're trying to figure yourself out, sometimes it takes doing things that you don't like in order to figure out what you do like. But it's important to maintain your sense of self throughout the journey. I've always been a firm believer in everything happening for a reason, but sometimes you have those doubts—whether it was a role that I auditioned for, and I'm like, Ugh, it's the end of the world I didn't get that job! Just know that as long as you keep going and you're passionate about what it is that you're doing, in the end, you're going to succeed. 17 just friends?

In The Hunger Games, Katniss feels conflicted about her close friendship with Gale.

the drama WITH GUY friends

Dudes are supposed to be the scandal-free alternative to gossipy girlfriends and boys who break your heart.

So why are things so...complicated? BY ELISA BENSON

The friendship you have with your best guy friend is pretty awesome: He's the one guy you can be totally yourself around, who gives you honest advice about your love life, and whom you can see on Friday night without needing to plan a whole new outfit. Your friends might even say, "You guys should just hook up already!" And of course you've thought about it, with a mix of curiosity (what would it be like?) and semi-grossed outness (ew, he's like my brother). But then there's one night after everyone else has gone home, and for some reason, your friendly chemistry gets super-charged. Suddenly the casual friendship you've always known has become romantically loaded—and emotionally confusing. So whether your relationship with your best guy friend has tipped into murky territory—or you just want to make sure it never does—here's how to navigate it while leaving the best parts of your friendship intact.

I want more than just hookups!

“ I’ve been messing around with my guy friend for a while. At first, it was casual—no feelings involved. But recently, when he does cute stuff like grab my hand or invite me to the movies, I’ve been thinking, Why aren’t we dating? Then the other day he mentioned something about a girl he likes, and I felt really jealous—even though that kind of thing wouldn’t have bothered me before. Am I falling for him? Or am I just being possessive? Help! ”

—Beth, 21

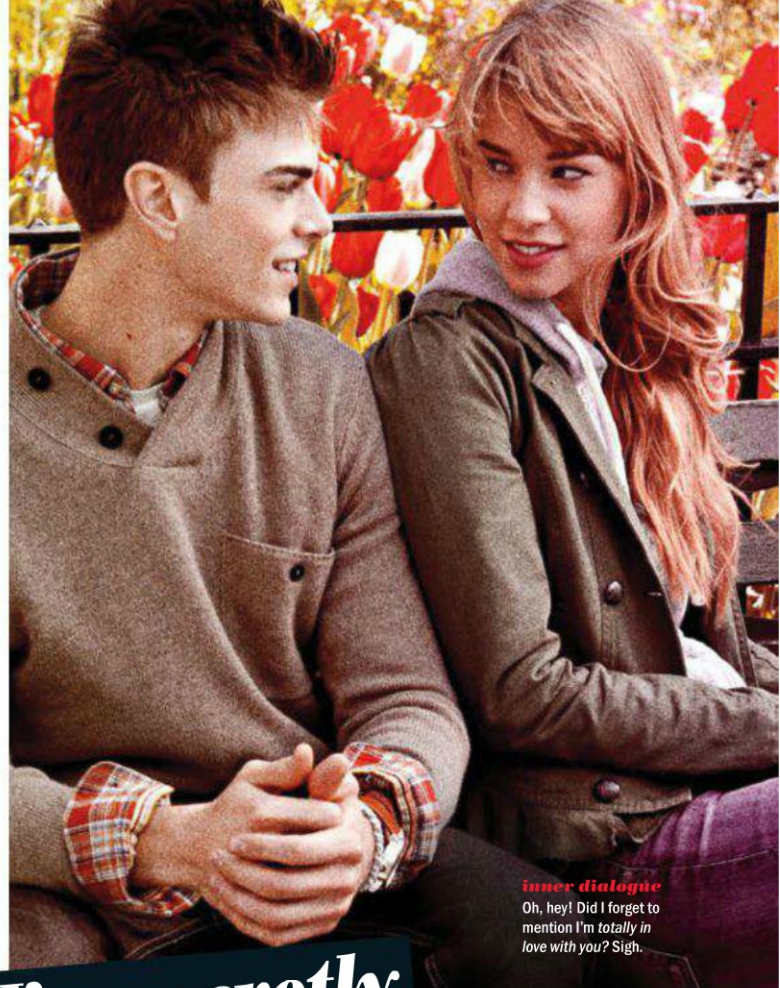

YOUR NEXT MOVE: The whole idea of the friends-with-benefits deal is that you hook up without the emotional stuff. Once emotions get involved, the deal ends and the drama starts. You have to decide whether you want to take things to the next level or get out altogether. (Sorry, there’s no in-between!) If this guy has the qualities you want in a BF, talk to him about making things official. If he doesn’t, stop hooking up. Making out won’t help you realize what you want—it will only confuse you more.

IS HE YOUR KICKSTAND?

A “kickstand” is a guy you lean on for support, even though you have no interest in dating him. Sure, it’s great when he responds to your 2 A.M. texts, listens when you have to vent, and wraps you in a bear hug when you need it most. But using him as a crutch isn’t fair to him or you. He’s bound to get attached even though you’re not committed, and you’re emotionally cheating on whoever you’re dating by turning to him instead. Even super-close friendships should have a few boundaries.

inner dialogue
Oh, hey! Did I forget to mention I’m totally in love with you? Sigh.

I’m secretly into him!

“ My best guy friend and I hang out all the time and talk about everything—there’s never any weirdness, and I feel totally comfortable around him. But lately, my feelings for him are stronger than ever before—I’m falling for him! My friends even called me out on acting flirty around him. One time I almost brought up my feelings for him, but I got scared and changed the subject. I want to tell him I like him, but I’m afraid of messing things up! ”

—Christina, 21

YOUR NEXT MOVE: You’ve got to go for it—it’s the only way to satisfy your heart. Next time you hang out, find subtle ways to make your night more datelike: Offer to pick him up, throw on a pair of heels, or pointedly let your hand linger on his arm. If he’s into your couple-y gestures, it’s a green light to spill your guts on the way home. Tell him, “I’ve been noticing something between us lately. Is it just in my head?” No matter what happens, at least you’ll know—rather than be stuck in emotional limbo.

He's falling in love with me!

“I’ve been friends with this guy for nearly a year and we hang out regularly. But lately he’s been going out of his way to spend even more time with me—he offers me rides, makes plans for us to hang out alone, and even took me to a fancy restaurant for my birthday. It finally hit me that he’s interested, but I just want to be friends—nothing more!”

—Lesia, 21

YOUR NEXT MOVE: If your friend makes a big gesture and you go along with it, you’re basically misleading him into thinking you feel the same way. Next time, be clear: “You know I love hanging out with you, but things have been a little intense. I want to be fair to you and make sure you know that I see us as just friends.” It’s harsh, but it will let him pull back before he falls any harder.

WHEN THE GUYS DON'T GET ALONG

You love your guy friend and your boyfriend—but when they get all weird and death glare-y around each other, it’s up to you to keep the peace.

CUT BACK ON FB

Letting your Facebook convos with either guy play out publicly rubs it in both of their faces, even if you’re talking about stuff that’s no big deal. Stick to private messages instead of comments or wall posts. That “Like” isn’t worth the crapstorm!

STOP THE GOSSIP

You’re used to pumping your friend for guy advice, but draw the line at venting about your relationship (and don’t dis your guy friend in front of your BF, either). They’re already feeling competitive, so the last thing they need is more ammunition.

DON'T FORCE A FRIENDSHIP

Sure, things would be easier if you all got along. But this isn’t Twilight. Trying to set up group hangouts or convince them both that “you’ll like him if you just get to know him” will annoy them—and make you feel even more stuck in the middle.

17 TIP:

Can’t figure out why your BF is perpetually annoyed by your best guy friend? Try this: Imagine how you’d feel if he had a super-close girl friend—anything that would get on your nerves (hugging in the hallway at school?) is a no-go.

CROSSING THE LINE

You think you act totally normal around your guy friend. But find out how he could be reading it.

FRIENDLY

Waging a thumb war.

Giving him detailed girl advice.

Giving him a compliment.

Hugging.

FLIRTY

Waging a tickle war.

Giving him detailed sex advice.

Giving him a compliment . . . while touching his arm.

Snuggling.

BOTTOM LINE: If you’re guilty of three or more “flirty” behaviors, your innocent moves are actually saying you’re interested. Unless you’re trying to make him fall madly in love with you, dial back the affection before you lead him on.

The hardest part of becoming tribute Foxface? Dying her naturally blonde hair flame-red for the character! “Ever since I changed it, I have to be more conscious of what I wear,” says Jacqueline, 17. “Sometimes it clashes!” But it works perfectly with copper sequins and brick-red shorts. “My hair does let me be a bit bolder!” she says. “I’m having fun with it.”

"I Faked my Pregnancy"

Gaby was sick of always trying to prove herself against everyone's low expectations, so she did something no one was expecting.

By Gaby Rodriguez

AS TOLD TO CLAUDINE KO
AND ADAPTED FROM THE PREGNANCY PROJECT

“What do you have to show for yourself after spending the last twelve years in school?” The statement was meant to inspire ideas for our senior class projects, but as I stared at the form, I didn't know how to respond. People had taken on new hobbies like massage therapy or dog training or baking, but I wanted to do something bigger, something that would make a huge impact.

I thought about my life and the events that had shaped it. My mom was 14 when she got pregnant with my oldest sister. After her divorce from her first husband, she never stopped struggling as a mom to seven kids. I've watched my brothers and sisters go through difficult times making ends meet too, after having kids as teens. People always seemed to expect that I'd follow the same path just because I'm Latina and a part of this family. I'm grateful for everything my mom has given up for me, but I couldn't help thinking, Did it have to be that way?

It felt like a puzzle I needed to solve. Then I came up with an idea. What if I faked my own pregnancy? I could find out firsthand what it's really like to be judged—and challenge the idea that a stereotype has to define your future. So finally during my senior year, I spent several months doing just that. I experienced what it feels like when people stop believing in you. And what it's like to have people write you off for one single mistake. Most important, I learned that while it's easy to judge someone, you can never really know her until you've walked a mile—or in some cases, nine months—in her shoes.

my "pregnancy" diary

DECEMBER 1, 2010

my first "trimester"

My mom and my boyfriend, Jorge, knew my idea and once my project was approved by my principal, I told my best friend Saida. They thought I was messing around at first, but I kept going. Now, it was time to start telling everyone.

Today, I was trying to act sick at lunch by not eating very much, but I couldn't have anyway, since I was a ball of stress! At the end of lunch period, my friends noticed my weird mood and confronted me. "You look really droopy," one of them said. The cafeteria was pretty much empty, but I still didn't have the courage to lie outright. Saida was way more brave. She looked at me, and then turned to everyone and said, "Gaby's pregnant!" Everyone immediately shut up. I was feeling so shaky that I stayed quiet too. My friend Blanca couldn't believe it. She said I was the last person in school she would have expected to get pregnant, that I was the one always telling everyone to be careful and not mess up our future. I told her I didn't know what to do, and when I asked her for advice, she just said to do whatever I thought was right. I felt so guilty about lying to my best friends.

word gets out

Nobody has mentioned abortion, or even adoption. It's like no one wants to take any sort of stand about what I should do. Mostly teachers have asked if I've seen a doctor and if I'm taking care of myself. Several have asked if I need anything or want to talk, which is nice. One just gasped. Saida said she heard another teacher tell a student, "Doesn't she know she just ruined her life?" Didn't they know that, even if I were pregnant, I'd still find a way to go to college and achieve my dreams for me and my baby? I had the worst time telling my favorite teacher, Mr. Myers. He has been my science teacher since freshman year and has always encouraged me and made me feel smarter than I thought I was. It felt terrible to lie to him and I immediately started crying from the guilt because I know he actually cares. I could tell he was thinking about my life going down the drain, but he still tried hard to be encouraging. "It doesn't have to be the end," he said. I didn't expect this to be so painful.

gossip flies

When I walk into a room, people get super-quiet, and sometimes they pretend not to see me. I'm paranoid that they're all talking about me. Saida has already overheard stuff—people saying how they can't believe how irresponsible I am and that Jorge is going to leave me. And even though I know it's just part of the project, I can't help but take things personally. It sucks to walk around all day knowing that people are gossiping about you, judging you—especially when some of them are supposed to be your friends. Everywhere around me there are messages of doom: You're trapped. You're never going to make it. You're going to be broke. You're never going to have any fun again.

Even my brothers and sisters have turned against me. They just give me dirty looks and ignore me, like I don't exist—except for Jessica. How many times has she said I was going to end up pregnant, just like her—wasn't this her moment of victory? But instead, all she said was, "I love you no matter what." I swallowed hard—I think back to how she'd been ostracized by my family, too. Now I knew what it was like to be her.

FEBRUARY 20, 2011

pregnancy is stealing my identity

All anyone wants to talk about is the baby. I'm just a human incubator now. But I'm still at the top 5 percent of my class, with a 3.8 grade point average. I'm still me, right?

Is there any point to this? Yeah, I now know better what it's like to be a teen mom, but is this going to teach anyone else anything? Every time I hear about friends having sex, I want to say, "You do not want to go through this." I'm getting depressed. April can't come fast enough.

BUZZ

APRIL 8, 2011

it feels real now

Today was my first day back at school after spring break. I wore a fitted shirt to show off my new bigger “bump” and walked into class. All eyes went straight to my belly. I begin to wonder where my life would be headed if I really were pregnant. I’m starting to see how my mom and sisters could have felt like they had to put their dreams aside. When people constantly tell you that your life is ruined, you start to feel like it’s true—whether it’s teen pregnancy or other problems.

Me, at “6 months”!

APRIL 20, 2011

the moment of truth

I finally did it! After months of feeling sick to my stomach as I lied to friends, family, and teachers, I told the truth.

My hands were shaking as I stood at the podium in our gymnasium. I held my index cards and looked at everybody in the stands—all 800 of them. I could see my mom sitting next to Jorge. Saida was there too. Principal Greene. Mr. Myers. I was so nervous I wanted to cry. I took a gulp of air to steady myself—my whole life I’ve been fighting stereotypes, and today was the day I was going to put an end to it. Or at least try.

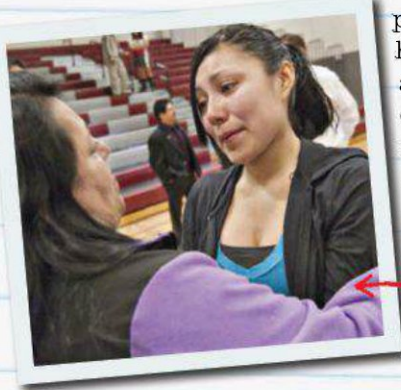

“My name is Gaby Rodriguez, I’m 17 years old, and a soon-to-be teen mom, and I became a statistic,” I said into the mic. “But . . .”

I could hardly breathe as I reached under my sweatshirt, pulling off the fake belly my mom had helped me make, and announced, “I’m not pregnant.” Everyone went silent. Then I heard a loud “Whaaaaaat?” Some people laughed. Finally, everyone started clapping. Someone even yelled, “That’s awesome!” I couldn’t keep from crying any longer. With shivers of relief running through me, I told my classmates about what I’d learned.

“Many things were said about me,” I began. “Her family won’t make a big deal out of this because they’re used to teen moms. Doesn’t she know she just ruined her life? There are stereotypes out there about us because we are Hispanic and come from a small town.” I took a deep breath in. “But after going through this for the past six and a half months, I see now that it’s okay to expect more for yourself than what everyone else is telling you.” Everyone in the gym was silent. I talked about how we can all rise above these stereotypes, even when the world is tearing us down. How it’s not going to be easy, but that you have to tune out all those who expect you to fail and embrace those who support you. The final words of my presentation were: “Every single one of you has the power to go to college and graduate, and I challenge each of you to take this as an example. No matter what mistakes you make, you can’t really fail if you continue to live your life and fight for your dreams.”

And that moment, I definitely wasn’t faking.

I hugged my mom and cried when the truth
finally came out.

WHAT HER BOYFRIEND THOUGHT!

Gaby’s BF promised to play along, but he had no idea what he was in for.

“When Gaby first told me about her idea I was like, ‘Are you crazy?’ But I listened to her. Finally I said, ‘It’s your project, so I’ll be with you every step of the way.’ I thought somehow I’d be immune to the judgments—teen dads always seem to get off the hook. But I quickly realized that wasn’t true.

When we started letting people know she was ‘pregnant,’ my parents told me I was ruining my life. My friends were just as negative, saying things like, ‘You screwed up,’ and ‘You’re tied to Gaby now.’ There were times I wanted to tell them, ‘It’s not real; it’s fake.’ People don’t realize how hard it is for the guy—no matter how willing

I was to own up to my ‘mistake,’ people wouldn’t let me live it down. I think Gaby is so brave for following this project through. Now I really try to get to know a person before I make up my mind.”

TRAUMARAMA

Everyone has had humiliating moments.

Fergie gets major trauma points. When life gives you a dress that doesn't zip, just turn it into a fashion statement!

GRINDING HALT

"I was so into getting freaky at our spring dance that when someone behind me put his hand on my shoulder, I just started grinding on him. When I turned around, I saw it was my history teacher! He was trying to stop my 'inappropriate' dancing. That was an awkward semester."

sorry, broski

"My friends and I were goofing off in line at the ski lifts when I accidentally skied into the guy in front of me who was next in line. Right that second, the lift came and picked up both of us—and the guy ended up sitting on me! On the whole ride up the mountain, this rather large man tried to make convo. Ski lifts are not my friend."

SMARTY PANTS

"Our class was crammed into the smallest room known to mankind for an activity. Trying to be friendly, I sat by the new girl in school. Halfway through, she jumped up thinking that the activity was over. I tugged on her yoga pants to tell her to sit down—which turned out to be a bad idea. I tugged a little too hard, and whoosh! Pants, meet ankles. But hey, on the bright side: Now everyone knows her name."

GREEN-CARPET TREATMENT

"I was walking offstage after a big choir show when the guy behind me stepped on my robe. I tumbled down the stairs and landed on my face! Because that wasn't bad enough, my braces got stuck in the carpet! I lay there, face to the floor, and when I finally broke free, I had green carpet pieces in my braces. Cute."

"I was hanging out with my crush, and when I went to kiss him, he laughed at me!" #sonotasplanned singin' her butt off

"I was performing in London, and I had a tiny hole in my leggings near my butt, but I thought no one would be able to tell. The hole kept getting bigger and bigger as I sang, but I didn't even notice! Finally, my manager ran onstage with a wrap, trying to cover me up, and I was like, 'You're ruining my vibe!' That's when she told me my butt cheek was exposed to the audience and the paparazzi. When I turned around, my entire band was laughing!" -V V BROWN

CELEB TRAUMA!

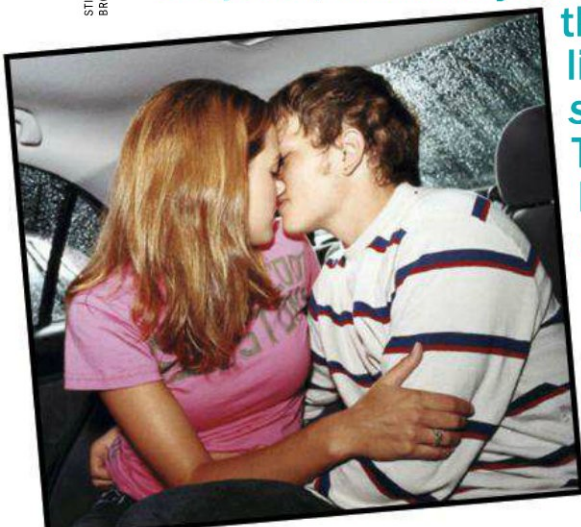

GLOW NO!

"I was on a spring-break cruise with my family and went to check out the ship's teen club. I didn't notice the black light all around the club when I sashayed in, wearing a tight black dress. All the guys were staring, and I admit it, I felt pretty hot—until a girl ran up to me and told me to change. I looked down: My white bra and panties were glowing through my dress. I ran out as everyone around me died laughing."

footloose

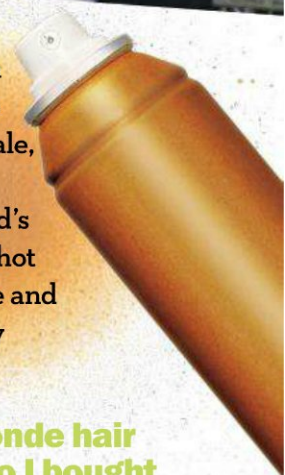

"My BF and I were hooking up in his mom's car, and we decided we'd be more comfortable in the backseat. I guess we must have gotten into it because the next week, we were in the car with his mom and she asked, 'Is that a footprint on the back windshield?' I was too mortified to speak, and she just gave us this look, like, she knew. That day I swore off car hookups forever!"

STILL LIFE: (SPRAY CAN) JESUS AYALA/STUDIO D.
BROWN: JASUN ANDERSON. KISSING COUPLE: MICHAEL SHARKEY.

NOT SO HOT

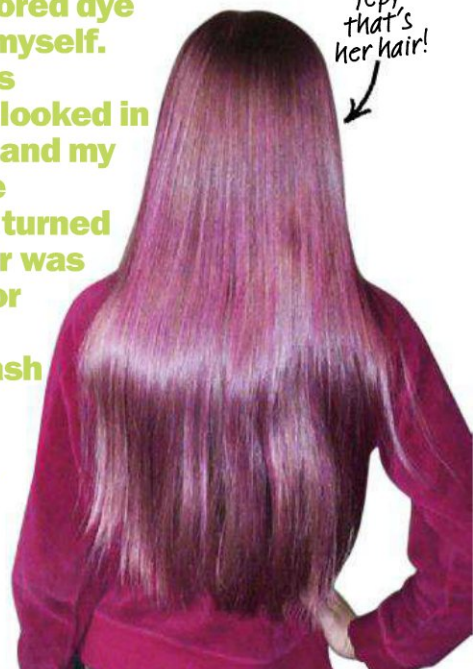

"I was at a pool party when my crush asked me to go into the hot tub. I looked insanely pale, so before getting in, I rushed to the bathroom and put on some of my friend's spray tan. But when I stepped into the hot tub, my spray tan slowly washed off me and into the water! We were surrounded by orangy swirls. Hotness fail."

to dye for

"I decided my light blonde hair needed a makeover, so I bought amber-colored dye and did it myself. When I was finished, I looked in the mirror and my locks were fuchsia! It turned out my hair was too light for the dye. I tried to wash it out, but the pink stayed for months."

Yep, that's her hair!

MARCH horoscope

by sally brompton

PISCES

Feb 19–Mar 20 Style-wise you're usually into soft colors—they're as dreamy as you are. But when the moon is new on the 22nd, you'll have the urge to get bold. After your girls see how hot your makeover is, they'll be inspired to take a risk, too. Trendsetter! ★

aries

Mar 21–Apr 19 Your crush has been flirting with you like crazy—such a rush! One thing you heart about him is his confidence, so when he shows you his vulnerable side on the 3rd, you'll be thrown. It doesn't make him a wuss; it means he trusts you. This could get serious! ♥

taurus

Apr 20–May 20 It totally sucks, but it's time to face facts: The guy you've been hanging out with isn't up for anything more than friendship. His loss! You'll want to be free by the 14th, anyway, when the stars introduce you to a new guy who'll be instantly smitten. Sweet. ♥

gemini

May 21–Jun 20 You don't want to hurt your BFF, but someone has to tell her she's acting bitchy! To find out what's really up with her, you'll need to have face-time with her before Mercury moves on the 12th. After that, she'll be less likely to open up—or calm down. ○

CANCER scorpio

Jun 21–Jul 22 Your crew knows you so well, but even they would be floored to see all the artsy things you create in private! On the 20th, the sun will urge you to show off your masterpieces. About time! Don't be shocked by all the "likes" you get when you post pics. ★

LEO

Jul 23–Aug 22 March will start off kind of quiet for Leos (zzz...), but when the sun is strong on the 24th, look out! You'll feel more energized than you have in forever, and party invites will come floodin' in. PS: A guy you meet at one bash will love your good vibes! ○

VIRGO

Aug 23–Sep 22 You and your ex broke up ages ago, but you haven't felt ready to delete his e-mails and texts. With the full moon's help on the 8th, you'll finally let go of all the stuff that's been holding you back from making a fresh start with new guys. That's major! ♥

libra

Sep 23–Oct 22 Hoping to land a cool new job or a spot in a hot study abroad program? Mercury will be poised to sing your praises on the 2nd, so that's the perfect day to ask your favorite teachers for a rec. Here's to amazing future plans, Libra: You've got this! ★

SAGITTARIUS

Oct 23–Nov 21 When your BFF has a secret, you can just tell. It's practically a superpower. On the 5th, you'll get the sense she's sneaking around with a new guy. You're right! She'll flip if you call her on it—but you won't have to wait long for her to spill. !

SAGITTARIUS

Nov 22–Dec 21 There's nothing you hate more than being bored, and what's boring you right now is everything in your closet. You're itching to hit the mall this second, but if you wait until the 13th, you'll find amazing deals and come back with tons of great swag, Sag! ★

CAPRICORN

Dec 22–Jan 19 Your friends can't help teasing you for being so practical all the time, so when you're in the mood to treat yourself on the 17th, they'll be on a mission to make sure you go all-out. Ready for a mega girls' night? Consider it booked! ○

AQUARIUS

Jan 20–Feb 18 A girl in class has been driving you nuts: Does she have to disagree with you about everything?!? But on the 5th, her fierceness will actually start to impress you. Sure, it would be an unlikely friendship, but this girl will keep you on your toes! !
